

2018 was India's Big Year for Green Literature

If the quality and quantity of books published in a year are an indicator of healthy discourse about the current state of India's environmental movement, 2018 has been a very good year for Indian green literature. The mix weighs, as it should be, towards how to address India's seemingly unsurmountable problems, and interestingly, in uniquely Indian ways. They are written by the very best in business which ensures greater credibility, an important factor in the post truth world. More>>

SN's 18-Point Agenda for 2019

With the national elections in India on the cards in a few months, it's a good time for NGOs and institutions in the environment-ecology space to get a Green Manifesto soon. More important than preparing the manifesto is to draw out a powerful strategy to maximize its reach. More>>
